"Parceling Out de People."

Fishing, two boys string their big catch on the same string. Passing a graveyard they entered the gate to divide the catch, dropping two fish just as they went inside the cemetery.

Passing an aged negro heard the two boys: "I'll take this one, you that one; I this one, you that one; I this one, you that one," etc.

"The negro, instead in dismay and ran away as rapidly as his old legs could carry him. He met his negro minister, who called:

"Deacon, why you run in such terror?"

"Deacon, parson, I been down yonder by de graveyard and over de fence heard de devil and de Lord parceling out de people between 'em."

The boys were still dividing: "You take that, I take this," etc. Finally one boy asked, "What you going to do with them two at the gate?"

"This was more than parson or deacon could stand, and both ran pell-mell, neither wishing to take any further chances, no matter what was going on just over the fence—Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

Penguin Battles.

The penguin, a notable diver among sea birds, wins his mate by right of conquest. The male birds fight for the possession of the females. These curious birds have regular duel grounds, where relays of invulnerable combatants in the shape of feathers lie scattered about. In the center is the fighting arena, clear of all debris. The penguins' feathers and dubber form an efficient shield against their opponents' beaks, so the weapon used is the short flipper, the only wings the birds possess. The fight begins with the two combatants walking round each other waiting for an opportunity to strike. Once this is done the flippers come into play. The fighters shove their flippers upon each other. There is no record as to how these fights end, but it is a safe supposition to say that they are seldom fatal. The force of the blow from a penguin's flipper is such that three or four of them will draw blood from the human hand.

How Models Make Pictures.

"Do you grasp," he said, "the passionate grace of the girl's attitude, the warmth and the power wherewith her fange white arms draw the young man closer, ever closer? Well, I got that idea from my model, a shopgirl. "But for my model's suggestion I'd have put the girl in a stiff, cold pose, and the picture would never have been the masterpiece it is. But my model pointed out to me the abandon where-with a girl, whether of high or low station, gives herself up to a kiss' charm. She illustrated the thing, aided by a male model, a young medical student. Yes, she made my picture. "The fact is, models make, with their valuable hints and suggestions, lots of pictures. There's many a masterpiece whose merit is due to the splendid pose that the model originated for the principal figure."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Burma's Popular Sports.

A form of speculation very popular in Burma is bull racing. A certain native sportsman is the owner of one of these bulls, for which he has refused an offer of 10,000 rupees. It has won several races and is looked after and as carefully tended as a Derby favorite. The owner values it at 25,000 rupees, and it is said it brings him an annual income of from 12,000 to 15,000 rupees. It is carefully guarded by four men, but it may be got at and "shot" at.

Burmans also patronize boxing eagerly, but the art can scarcely be practiced according to Quinsbury rules, for we are told by a provincial reporter that he has observed that "even the best boxers strike out with their eyes tightly shut, and if they do hit each other it is more by chance than anything else."—Calcutta Statesman.

The Wrong Lady.

Some young ladies had been enjoying the fun of having passing shopgirls with either doubtful compliments, and from some of the answers returned it was evident that not all of these addresses were taken kindly. Recently one of the older boys, seeing it was going too far, spoke up: "Look a' here now, fellows," he added, "youse might think youse is wise guys an' all that, but just keep on an' the wrong lady'll come along, an' she'll break yer face, see?"—Argonaut.

Shameless.

Persons belonging to the higher walks of life are to be seen promenading in short jackets and chimney pot hats without the slightest symptom of awkwardness or shame.—London Tailor and Cutter.

Fortune displays our virtues and our vices as light makes all objects apparent.—La Rochefoucauld.

At Last.

Mrs. Silas Bennett was a philosopher. On a certain dismal occasion some of the neighboring women were condoling with her. With commendable cheerfulness she replied:

"I've raised four girls an' three boys, expectin' every time they'd be twins and red headed like their Grandpa Bennett, an' yet they ain't."

"An' I've worried considerable over smallpox breakin' out in my big family. So for 'tain't."

"Last summer durin' July an' August an' mebbe part of September I was real melancholic, fearin' I'd got an appendix, but I guess I ain't."

"An' though it all it never once occurred to me that I'd be the one to fall through them rotten old meeth' house steps an' break my leg in two places, but I be."

In Extremis.

Late one night a clergyman was called out to minister to an old man—a worker upon the adjacent railway—who was supposed to be dying. The summons was brought by another old man, the elder brother of the stricken one. While he was bustling about, making preparations for departure, the clergyman forgot momentarily the social status of his visitor and asked, "Is he in extremis?"

"The old man was not going to be beaten. "Aye, he's right in, your reverence." After a pause he added as a clincher: "Clean in, poor chap. Right up to the neck, sir."—Cornhill Magazine.

He Had Been There.

Rodrick—Howdy, old man? We are going on a camping trip soon. Did you ever enjoy a camping trip where you had to do your own cooking and sleep beneath the stars? Van Albert—Nope. Rodrick—What? No you mean to say you have never been on a camping trip? Van Albert—No, I mean to say that I never enjoyed one.—Chicago News.

Hospitality.

Maamma—Tommy, I see you took two pieces of cake instead of one, as I told you. Why did you do that? Tommy—Well, maamma, I was playing that another little boy was visiting me, and I knew you wouldn't mind me giving him a piece.—Chicago News.

Learning Early.

A Sunday school teacher had been telling her class the story of the good Samaritan. When she asked them what the story meant a little boy said, "It means that when I am in trouble my neighbors must help me."—Universalist Leader.

Won't Figures Lie?

Mrs. Doyle—I am just twenty-three. Mrs. Doyle—I don't see how you figure it. You were twenty-two when you had your black silk, and you haven't had a new dress for ten years.—New York Press.

He Crowded Too Soon.

She—You'll be glad to learn, dear, that I've got out of visiting our relatives. He—Grand! Splendid! It hung over me like a cloud. How did you manage it? She—Oh, I asked them here!

The Telephone.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell is reported to have explained in a lecture how he came to invent the telephone as follows:

"My father invented a symbol by which deaf mutes could converse, and finally I invented an apparatus by which the vibrations of speech could be seen, and it turned out to be a telephone. It occurred to me to make a machine that would enable one to hear vibrations. I went to an artist and he advised me to take the human ear as my model. He supplied me with a dead man's ear, and with this ear I experimented, and upon applying the apparatus I found that the dead man's ear wrote down the vibrations."

"I arrived at the conclusion that if I could make from vibrations on a dead man's ear I could make an instrument more delicate which would cause those vibrations to be heard and understood. I thought I'd placed a delicate piece of steel over an electric magnet I could get a vibration, and thus the telephone was completed."

"The telephone arose from my attempts to teach the deaf to speak. It arose from knowledge, not of electricity, but as a teacher of the deaf. Had I been an electrician I would not have attempted it."

Cocoanuts Make Good Fuel.

"Mine is rather a curious business," said a man who owns a small ware house and shed down near London's docks. "I deal in coconut shells, and last year I sold more than 50,000 bags full of them as fuel."

"I buy thousands of coconut shells

A Healthy Family.

Where Bullets Flew.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done is worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters and they cured me. I now take them a table, and they keep me strong and well." 50c. at all druggists.

Another Way Out of It.

Nobody had ever had reason to accuse Abel Pond of being dishonest, but he was as sharp a man in a bargain as could be found in the county. When the building committee applied to him for a site for the new library he was ready to sell them a desirable lot, but not at their price.

"I couldn't feel to let it go under $800," he said, with the mild obstinacy that characterized all his dealings with his fellow men. "It wouldn't be right."

"You ought to be willing to contribute something for such an object," said the chairman of the committee. "If it's worth six hundred, why not let us have it for five hundred and call it you've given the other hundred?"

"M'm—no, I couldn't do that," said Mr. Pond, stroking his chin, "but I tell you what I will do. You give me seven hundred for it, and I'll make out a check for a hundred and hand it over to you, so's you can hand the list of subscriptions with a good round sum and kind of wake up folks to their duty."—Youth's Companion.

Had a Close Call.

Mrs. Ada L. Croom, the widely known proprietor of the Croom Hotel, Vaughn, Miss., says: "For several months I suffered with a severe cough and consumption seemed to have its grip on me, when a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. I began taking it, and three bottles affected a complete cure." The fame of this life saving cough and cold remedy, and lung and throat healer is world wide. Sold at all druggists. 50c. and $1.00.
